

On The Great White Way

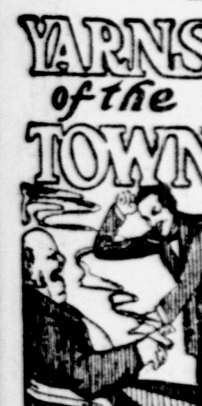

NEAR-NEWS AND CHATTER FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

To the lady first correctly guessing the identity of the person of whom the following is a character sketch, and bringing a copy of this paper to The Tribune office, a cash prize of $1.00 will be given. The subject of the sketch is a prominent citizen of La Crosse. After winning one prize, a contestant will not be eligible to again compete for a period of three months.

Miss Celia Volz, 624 South Seventh street, was the winner of last week's contest, the subject of which was Ed Dittman.

He moves about so quietly in his sandy complexioned way that one gets from his presence the pleasant sensation of friendly sunshine filtered through cooling shade. It takes years to detect in him anything in the way of assertion, and so, in some rare moment when the fires within him flame up, the discovery that he is a man of deep convictions and stonewall purpose comes with surprising force. When you come to know him, he's a manly, upstanding man, endowed with calm dignity and gracious kindness. He smiles slightly, but seldom squanders his cheerfulness in a laugh. And he never, never frowns. He takes his chance on life unperturbed by life's hazards, and in a representative capacity he's willing to take a chance on the lives of pretty much the entire population for whom the doctors will certify. He's been about the same age for years and years, for there is little wear and tear of time on men of great self control. He was a man in La Crosse before many who are now fathers and mothers were born, but had he faded in the years could not have been more kind to him. Dear reader, if you've "guessed who's here," just run down to The Tribune office and say, "I gotcha, Steve!"

Charley Peterson was dining at the Elks' club with Joe Skinner and a party of friends, when Frank Koppelberger came in and walked straight up to the Peerless one. "Got any cigars in your pocket, Peterson?" asked the "voddil" magazine. Mr. Peterson produced three, one of them a fine Garcia dressed only in a loose, red wrapper. "That's it," said Kopp, with profane hands possessing himself of the aristocratic smoke. "You see," explained Mr. Koppelberger, as he lighted the weed. "Your coat is just like mine, and we both left them hanging on a tree in the billiard room when we were playing. Somebody bought, and I took a cigar, but by mistake I put it in your pocket." The laugh went round, and then Joe Skinner arose mysteriously and left the room. A moment later he returned in his shirt sleeves, and with

STOLE $50,000 A YEAR

NEW YORKER CONFESSES HE MADE HUGE PROFITS FROM SALE OF SILK STOLEN FROM EXPRESS TRUCKS

NEW YORK, April 19.—A "business" that has been costing New York merchants more than $1,000,000 a year was unfolded today to Assistant District Attorney Brouten, when Louis J. Sherman, alias Robinson, told how he and his partner had been clearing more than $50,000 a year by disposing of stolen silk and woolen goods. The partner, M. D. Lusovos, is now being sought by police throughout the country. Sherman confessed to Brouten and went into every detail of his "business," no small part of which was the corrupting of truck drivers who delivered goods to his "receiving stations" in various downtown buildings. Sherman was arrested January 28 and pleaded guilty to receiving stolen goods. He did not confess to the wide operation of his "firm," however, until a truck driver tried before Judge O'Sullivan last night, implicated him.

ON THE INCOME TAX

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS MAKES ONLY SLIGHT CHANGE RELATING TO INSURANCE TAXATION IN TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, April 19.—House democrats hoped to finish their tariff caucus today and write a final "O. K." on the Wilson-Underwood bill. Details of the income tax feature were taken up today. The constitutional lawyers of the majority made their final objections—and then capitulated to the call of party regularity. Following futile attempts late yesterday to make incomes as low as $2,500 subject to the income tax, the democrats today agreed to the minimum taxation basis of the $4,000 annual income. So far the only amendment to the income tax has been that of the ways and means committee, making no incomes of life insurance companies taxable and eliminating alleged double taxation of life insurance policies.

NEGRO MINISTER BEGS FOR FREEDOM

Oshkosh Pastor Held for Witness in the Case Against Companion Solicitor

SOLICIT MONEY FOR SCHOOL

Prominent Business Men Donate to Support of Institution Said Not to Exist

"Honorable Sir—Dear Honorable Sir (with the accent on the Dear Honorable): It is positively imperative that I be in Oshkosh tomorrow to address my congregation—to explain if possible the predicament I am in and the cause of my delay. I must also arrange for a meeting Monday at which plans for the building of our church are to be discussed and I have an appointment with the bishop that I must not fail to keep. Honorable Sir, if you will let me go home I promise to be back whenever you want me. I sure will. I sure will. Honorable Sir."

With his face shining with hope and his eyes glistening behind his thick glasses, his hands clasped in supplicant tenacity, Rev. George W. Claughton (colored), pastor of the African Methodist church of Oshkosh (as yet not built) made the above eloquent plea for freedom before Judge John Brindley in county court today. But the masterpiece of oratory fell on deaf ears and the judge ordered the suppliant returned to jail to wait the preliminary hearing of his companion, Henry B. Alexander, who pleaded not guilty today to a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. Although the police have preferred no charge against Rev. Claughton, he is being held as a witness.

Raise Fund for School

Alexander and Claughton were arrested last Tuesday while Alexander, accompanied by Claughton, was soliciting funds for a "Colored People's Divinity and Industrial School of Milwaukee," which the police declare does not exist. According to the books and accounts found on Alexander and Claughton, Alexander has been "working La Crosse" for the last twelve years—twice a year. The names of several of the most prominent business men in the city are found with great frequency on the books with annotated donations of from $5 to $50 each time. The particular donation which will be used in the trial is that of Gund's brewery, $5, which was given in a check written to the Colored Divinity and Industrial school and which was endorsed and cashed by Alexander.

This is the first time Claughton has visited La Crosse and according to the story he told the police he was attempting to raise money for the "African Methodist church of Oshkosh," which he wanted the money for a church building. He declared that he had been induced to come to La Crosse by Alexander who told him he knew where he could get easy money.

According to an estimate made by Chief of Police John Webber, the men have collected enough money in La Crosse and other Wisconsin towns to average more than $60 a week apiece. When quizzed by the police Alexander declared that the school does exist but when told that the police were in communication with Milwaukee he admitted that it had gone out of existence in 1903. He asserted that it had been revived for one year in 1911, however. Alexander exhibited documents to prove that he was the president of the school and the authorized solicitor. Although he admitted that the school did not exist he has made semi-annual trips to La Crosse to collect money.

With the money the pair have raised in other cities of the state it is estimated that several thousands of dollars have been collected. They are unable to account for the money they raised.

Find "Mash Notes"

In searching Alexander's effects the police found two very warm "mash notes" written by a female hand. Alexander claimed that they had been given him by a girl in a depot restaurant to give to a friend of his. A card bearing the legend, "Henry B. Alexander, Lawyer, Gary, Ind.," was also found among his belongings, whereas he posed as the pastor of a church in Milwaukee.

Both of the negro ministers were prosperously attired, Alexander in a soft brown hat and suit of brown, and Claughton in a cutaway coat of black and a high black stiff hat.

Alexander immediately entered a plea of not guilty when arraigned today and was held under $1,000 bail for preliminary examination next Tuesday at 2 p. m. If sufficient evidence is introduced to warrant trial he will be bound over to circuit court. Alexander has employed Frank Winter as counsel.

The bishop with whom Claughton said he had an appointment today, was Bishop G. L. Blackwell, 429 Eleventh street, Philadelphia.

WILSON UNMOVED BY JAP ATTITUDE

President Will Not Admit There Is Any Reason for War with the Japanese

WATCHES THE SITUATION CLOSELY

Executive Studies Over Case and Orders State Department to Keep Him Posted

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Agitation, either at home or abroad, will not move President Wilson into the admission that there exists any reason for a war scare over the Japanese situation. He emphasized this today when he declined to meet a delegation of Californians, who have been here for the last two weeks "explaining" just why California should enact the pending anti-alien land owning legislation.

Wilson is keeping in touch with developments both in Japan and on the Pacific slope. The state department has been instructed to watch the anti-American meetings throughout Japan. At the same time the president, by means of confidential agents, is keeping in touch with California.

In order to be thoroughly familiar with all the facts the president took today a study of the protests by Japan filed in the Roosevelt administration, the unofficial protest now before him presented by the Japanese ambassador, and the digest of the various state and territorial laws. At the same time he instructed Secretary of State Bryan to have the American charge d'affaires at Tokyo keep the department informed at all times of every development in Japan.

Deluge Legislation

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 19.—While action on the anti-alien land owning bills has been deferred until Monday by agreement, the California legislator today received a deluge of letters and telegrams, approving or disapproving the pending measures.

It is now certain that the bill in its final form will hit only the Japanese. An unofficial poll of legislators indicates that sentiment is in favor of excluding the brown men.

TOKIO, April 19.—Japan has a foreign land ownership law, passed in 1910, which is similar in some respects to the proposed alien law now before the California legislature.

The Japanese statute has never been strictly enforced, but it was predicted today that the government would rigidly enforce it, should the California bill become a law.

JAILBIRD SUCCEEDS TO BRITISH TITLE

Man Jailed in Leavenworth Prison Falls Heir to Peerage in England

HAS LONG RECORD IN PRISON

New Sir Frederic Grey Is Black Sheep of Prominent English Family

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., April 19.—From a cell in the federal prison here to a British peerage will be the experience of Convict No. 4773 when he is released June 16, after serving one year and one day for using the mails to defraud.

Fred Grey was received last fall from Texas, where he was convicted in connection with Mexican land frauds. Grey comes of a prominent English family of which he has been the "black sheep" having spent most of his time since 1902 in penal institutions. He has a record of having served three terms in English prisons on offenses of bigamy, forgery and obtaining money under false pretenses.

A clergyman was received at the prison today announcing that by the death of his elder brother in England, Grey would succeed to the title and estate. He will take the title of Sir Frederic Grey and leave for England to assume his honors on release from federal prison.

Grey also claims to have 30,000 acres of valuable land in Mexico.

"COWBOY MYSTIC" SWINDLED WIDOW

Oriental Mysteries Said to Have Aided Cult Leader to Dupe Mrs. McElowney

IS ARRESTED IN WYOMING TOWN

Alleged Revealer of Past Is Held in West to Await Extradition Papers from Chicago

Oriental mysticism as practiced by a Wyoming cowboy was the method by which Mrs. Hope McElowney, of West Salem, was lured out of $15,500 in Chicago March 3 according to the complaint against James Ryan who was arrested in Lusk, Wyo., today on a charge of swindling. Extradition papers are being prepared for the alleged "Revealer of the Past," who is said to have victimized Mrs. McElowney while she communed with spirits that hovered about his shrine in Chicago, and if the papers are recognized by the governor of Wyoming the man will be taken to Chicago for trial.

Posed as Mystic

It is said that Ryan posed as "Prof. Charles Crane," healer, clairvoyant, mystic and leader of a strange cult who mixed mysterious potions while he chanted weird offerings to an unknown god. That the impostor was an eminent success in the art of separating his victims from their earthly possessions is evinced by the complaint which accuses him of victimizing the West Salem woman to the extent of $15,500.

Swindled by Two?

At the time Mrs. McElowney's loss became known here and in West Salem, it was announced by her son that she had been swindled by two men who posed as members of an investment firm and that she had turned the money over to these men for investment, as she supposed, in Great Northern Railroad bonds. He said that as soon as they obtained possession of her money they left for New York, supposedly to procure the bonds which were to be sent to her in West Salem where they had sent her on a plausible pretext. When the bonds failed to appear she became suspicious and complained to the Chicago police. Up to the news of the arrest in Wyoming today, no word had been received of the progress of the police investigation.

Mrs. McElowney's son denied that there was any truth to the rumor which gained wide circulation at that time that Mrs. McElowney was engaged to be married to one of the men who swindled her. He said that the rumor was based on idle gossip of some of her old neighbors in West Salem.

Inherited Fortune

Mrs. McElowney is the daughter of Leonard Lottridge, who until the time of his death, was one of the best known politicians in western Wisconsin and at one time the editor of a newspaper in La Crosse. His daughter inherited a fortune from him which was materially increased on the death of her husband, the cashier of a bank in West Salem. Since her husband's death Mrs. McElowney has spent considerable time in travel and made her home for the most part in Chicago.

It has not been learned whether she recovered any of the money she was swindled out of or not.

POPE PIUS KEEPS UP HIS RECOVERY

His Holiness Much Better Today and Will Be Convalescent in Two Days

IS THIRD DAY WITHOUT FEVER

Passes Quiet Night in Sleep and Is Able to Take a Little Food Today

ROME, April 19.—Pope Pius was said to be much better today and his condition continued to improve uninteruptedly. He passed a fairly tranquil night, without fever and early today partook of nourishment which his stomach retained without difficulty. His temperature was 97.1.

This is the third day the holy father has been without fever and the physicians say that if he passed two more such days he may safely be regarded as convalescent.

From midnight, the pope had a quiet night. He awoke early this morning and was restless, his lips moving, seemingly in prayer. But he said he felt better and dismissed all but one attendant. Then he fell asleep.

Dr. Marchiafava in a statement that two more days of rest for his system would make the pontiff safely convalescent. Marchiafava stated, after the first visit of the morning, that he had no reason to fear the day would bring any change for the worse.

EDITOR VINDICATED

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 19.—That Circuit Judge Gurle erred in adjudging Colonel W. R. Nelson of the Kansas City Star guilty of contempt for an article appearing in his paper criticising the court, was the substance of a report filed in the supreme court today by Commissioner C. C. Crow. The report held that the courts have ruled that a newspaper had the right to place a reasonable construction on the action and orders of the courts and could differ with the court, so long as they did not impugn the motives of the court.

BADGER DEPOSITS RAISED $50,000,000

Bank Commissioner Kuolt's Report Shows Enormous Gain in the Last Year

TEN MILLIONS IN LAST MONTH

Total Resources and Liabilities of State Banks Are Increased by $25,230,642.01

MADISON, Wis., April 19.—That the resources of Wisconsin banks have increased more than $50,000,000 in the last year was the statement today of State Bank Commissioner Kuolt when he issued his quarterly report. The report showed the total resources and liabilities of Wisconsin state bank and trust companies to be $223,016,845.37; as against $218,511,829.22 on Feb. 4, an increase of $4,505,016.15. The report showed the total deposits to be $186,158,677.72 against $182,413,530.76 in February, an increase of $3,745,146.96.

In his report Kuolt declared that the total resources and liabilities of the banks had increased $25,730,642.01. He said the money deposited in state banks represented about half the deposits in both state and federal institutions throughout the state and that the total increase for the past year would approach fifty million dollars, more than ten million of which has been deposited in the last month.

BELIEVE MARTIN ALIVE

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 19.—While relatives here of J. W. Martin, cotton broker, missing from London, have not received word from his direct, they now accept the fact that he is alive and safe. It became known today that following the flood of 1912, which inundated Martin's Arkansas holdings, he speculated heavily on the Liverpool exchanges and lost. To retrieve he made some large land deals in London. They fell through and he disappeared. Officials believe the loss of Martin's wrecked company will amount to $400,000.

MORRIS PUTS OUT FIRE THREATENING LIFE OF DAUGHTER

Lieutenant Governor Saves Miss Cassie Morris from Death in Flames

CLOTHING AND HAIR ABLAZE

Rushes Downstairs Into Father's Arms; He Is Burned Quenching the Fire

The chance arrival of Lieutenant Governor Thomas Morris at his home, 1309 Main street at one o'clock this afternoon, proved the means of saving the life of his seventeen year old daughter, Cassie Morris. Just as Governor Morris ascended the steps of his home his daughter rushed in her arms with her clothing and hair in flames. The girl was panic stricken and if Mr. Morris had not arrived at that moment would undoubtedly have been burned to death.

Burns His Hands

Mr. Morris at once threw the girl to the floor and smothered the flames with his hands and a rug. He was severely burned about the hands and wrists as a result of his fight with the fire and was compelled to have his injuries treated by a physician this afternoon. Dr. G. J. Egan rubbed the burned flesh with cooling lotion and swathed his hands and arms in bandages. The girl was not seriously burned and will recover without a scar.

According to the story of the girl she had gone to the bath room to turn on the gas heater which heats the water. In some unexplained manner the back of her dress was swept across the burner of the heater and became ignited. She did not notice that her dress was afire until the flames had reached up her back to her hair. Screaming for help she dashed from the bath room and for the front door with the flames and smoke streaming out behind her. Her idea was to get into the open air. Her efforts merely fanned the flames to greater ferocity. As she reached the door she ran screaming into the out-stretched arms of her father who had just returned home from a business trip in Indiana.

Taken Unawares

Although taken unawares Lieutenant Governor Morris did not allow the girl to get by him but grabbed her in spite of her frantic efforts to gain the street. He threw her to the floor and smothered the flames near her face with his hands. He used a rug to cover her body. It was the work of but a moment to extinguish the fire but the girl was near hysterics and it took the united efforts of her father and mother to make her realize that the danger was past.

Mr. Morris then hastened to the office of Dr. Egan where he had his wounds dressed. It is the belief of the girl's mother that if she had been able to pass her father at the door nothing could have saved her life.

Mr. Morris modestly declined to say anything about his part in the accident today beyond expressing thankfulness that he happened to be on hand to meet the emergency.

It is believed that all the skin will come off the palms of his hands but as yet he feels but little pain as a result of his experience.

FOREIGN MARKETS

New York Stocks
NEW YORK, April 19.—The stock market opened dull and heavy.

11 a. m.—Trading was very dull during the first hour, though the market hardened and most of the leaders were firm. Reading showed a substantial strength in early sales and there appeared to be a demand for Canadian Pacific.

Firmness of Union Pacific was taken as an indication that there was no apprehension regarding the outcome of the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific dissolution.

The stock market closed dull and irregular.

Chicago Grain Review
CHICAGO, April 19.—Diminished receipts at Minneapolis and a bullish Liverpool cable sent wheat up today. After opening firm, May advanced 1/2 and July a full cent in the short morning session.

Continued light receipts and big lake shipments gave the corn market a strong tone and prices advanced immediately after the opening. May registered a 3/4c and July a 1/2c advance during the day's trading.

Oats sold a shade lower at the start, but had a quick recovery, the market for both months closing with options 1/4c over the day's opening. Trade in provisions was dull, with a strong undertone.

NEW YORK, April 19.—The day's stock market was motionless. Prices moved within a narrow fractional range and at intervals all trading ceased. The case seemed to be that the "short interest" which was driven out of the market a fortnight ago and this week re-established its position and that the status is, therefore, exactly what it was at the opening of the month. There seems to be no other business than these floor operations.

Many causes unrelated to one another are cited to explain why the investing public did not take in full and over-subscribe the St. Paul's offer of $30,000,000—4 1/2 per cent general mortgage bonds at a fraction under par, that it is more than usually difficult to draw positive inferences. All that can be said to have proved beyond dispute is that at the present moment, our investing public is holding out for more attractive inducements than a 4 1/2 per cent return on its capital.

When this is said, however, it remains also to remark that there is under way a process of some sort of readjustment in the basis of income yield on such securities. Indeed, it must equally be recognized that such a movement has been in progress during some years past, though its actual working has been masked by the wholesale recourse to short term treasury bonds or notes. It is probable that this recourse has complicated the general problem.

A GIRL OF THE MOUNTAINS
Few authors of the day have achieved the solid success that has been accorded Lem B. Parker, author of the charming play, "A Girl of the Mountains," which Wee & Lambert's company will present at La Crosse theater Sunday, April 20, matinee and night. The production is said to be replete with new scenery, new costumes, new electrical effects. The author has chosen a darling theme and handled it masterfully. We are taken into the life of people and shown the hearts of men and women. The characters are cleverly drawn and skilfully presented by a strong cast, headed by Miss Isabel Ogden, a strikingly beautiful and accomplished actress as the mountain girl, Nellie Bonn. "A Girl of the Mountains" makes a powerful appeal to the great public, who go to the theater for entertainment and relaxation from business and domestic cares and worries, and succeeds admirably.

BELLA DONNA
The talented Russian actress, Madame Nazimova, is this season presenting James Bernard Fagan's dramatic version of Robert Hichens' most widely read novel, "Bella Donna." Madame Nazimova, of course, plays Mrs. Chepstone, the central figure of both play and story. It is said that the scenic environment furnished by Charles Frohman is exceptionally handsome. The part is said to offer Madame Nazimova particularly excellent opportunities and that she makes her "Bella Donna" splendidly evil and fascinatingly heartless. The cast includes Charles Bryant, Herbert Percy, Robert Whitworth, Amy Veness, A. Romaine Callender, Claus Bogel, Edward Fielding, William Hassen, Arthur Hurley, May Gayler and others. Madame Nazimova in "Bella Donna," comes to the La Crosse theater Monday, April 28.

LOST CO-ED RETURNS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 19.—The parents of Miss Mabel Glasscock, the Indiana university co-ed who disappeared here last Saturday, were satisfied today with her explanation that illness, accompanied by a high fever was responsible for her movements, which alarmed her family and private detectives employed in a search. She is safe at her home in Flora, Ind.

Roses From Italy.
The rose, so long considered the floral emblem of England, was not known in that country until the early part of the fifteenth century. Rose trees were then brought from Italy and planted in the royal gardens. They were sent as presents from the holy father and highly esteemed by royalty. It became the custom to carve them over the doors of the confessional as holy flowers, hence the term sub rosa (under the rose) used to mean "with secrecy."—Ave Maria.

VAUDEVILLE NETS $350 FOR ATHLETES

High School Show Entertains Large Audience;
Acts Staged in Fine Style

The second annual high school vaudeville show was last night given before the largest crowd ever assembled in the high school auditorium. The show was a success in every way, all of the acts were run off in fine style and the athletic association will realize about $350 for effort put forth.

Miss Lillian Smith and Ross Harris, billed as the Dixie entertainers, got their act over in fine style. Their harmony singing was exceptionally good. Harris did some fancy clog dancing and roller skate dancing. They received the lion's share of the applause.

Myron Locke gave several readings from "A Fool There Was," in fine style. His setting was the most sumptuous ever seen at the high school. Mr. William Wagner read the prologue to Mr. Locke's act.

A pretty little conceit was an act pulled off by Harry Young. He had a number of people dressed as dummies that are used to advertise the different wares. At a touch of the wand of the storekeeper each dummy went through the mechanical motions of his goods. Gretchen Schweizer as "Dutch Cleanser" was good.

Miss Esther Wager and chorus appeared in Yama Yama costumes with a song, "The Ghost of the Banjo Coon," which was the best song and dance act of the evening.

Miss Winifred Forbes and Harry Marshall and chorus sang a number of very pretty songs during the evening in a most charming manner.

Harry Olberg's act, "A Night at College," was there with the college life and pep.

The Athletic association is greatly indebted to Miss Dunn, Miss Desmond and Miss Wylie for the coaching of the acts and to Miss Rollins and Miss Weisbord and Mr. Benezet for the musical assistance.

Real Surprise Ahead.

"What are you doing, Polly?" asked her mother. "I'm knitting, Mummy dear," replied the young woman. "I heard George say the other day he was afraid he'd have to buy a new muffler for his car, and I thought I'd knit him one as a sort of surprise."—Harper's Weekly.

REUNION AND DANCE ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Students and visitors who attended the W. B. U. dance and reunion held at the University hall last night are unanimous in declaring it a most delightful affair. Many graduates from the surrounding towns came to La Crosse to participate, and in addition there were a number of visitors who have never had an opportunity to take part in the affairs of the school. Kreutz's orchestra furnished the music. An informal lunch was served during the evening.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

Story of
The Bad
News Boy.

"G RUMPY, grouchy, all day long. Never singing a merry song; Never happy with friend or toy. Don't be like the Bad News Boy."

That's a little verse daddy repeated to Jack and Evelyn one evening. Of course the children wanted to know at once what daddy meant by "the Bad News Boy."

"Oh," said daddy, "he was a boy I knew once who never had anything good to tell. If you met him in the morning and the sun was shining brightly, the birds were singing and everything looked gay and happy he would look up at the sky and say in a whining voice, 'I'm afraid it's going to rain soon.'"

"Of course when something really bad happened, such as a fire or the minister was taken ill or the rain didn't come for a long time and crops refused to grow, the Bad News Boy seemed happy."

"But he was cured at last, and this was how it happened: His cousin Will came to visit him and spend some weeks at his house. Will was a merry, light hearted, cheerful boy, just the opposite of the Bad News Boy, and the parents of the latter liked him very much. Of course they had tried to cure their own boy of his bad fault, but had not been able to do so. They decided to try again when Will came. They bought a nice new bicycle and told the two boys they might have it to ride upon. Will was delighted and said so, but the Bad News Boy said:

"I don't want to ride on it. Any one who rides on that thing will fall off and get hurt." Will said, "I'm not afraid." And for a week or so he had a fine time on the wheel. Then something happened. He was riding along the road one day when Deacon Robinson's house caught fire. The deacon's horse was sick and could not be harnessed, so the deacon begged Will to ride as quickly as he could into town to fetch the firemen. Will did so, of course, and the firemen got there in time to save the house.

"Will was the hero of the town. Every one had a good word for him. The people made so much of him that the Bad News Boy became envious. 'Boo! It wasn't so much to do!' he said to his father. 'No,' said his father, 'but if you had been willing to ride the bicycle and had been on the spot instead of Will you might have been the hero instead of him.'"

"That made the Bad News Boy think. He wasn't a stupid boy, and when he saw how little good his gloominess did him he tried hard to overcome it. It took a long time, but he succeeded at last in becoming a Good News Boy instead of a Bad News Boy."

Horace Greeley once said, "The way to resume is to resume." In this H. G. was right. He usually was. The way to do anything is to do that thing. For example:

THE WAY TO BOOM IS TO BOOM

This does not mean running around in circles and yelling your head off. The only thing boomed by that method is the dippy house. The way to boom a town is by intelligent and united effort.

STOP BREEDING GERMS AND FLIES TO SWAT

"In the spring the young man's man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts
of love," but no sooner has he cozily ensconced himself in his portion of a hammock built for two than his sensitive nostrils are beset by the odors of that same poetic spring.

No, dear reader, they are not the smells of the wind flower or of plum blossoms that assail him. There is the smell of smoke, but let it pass,
"for that's a very good sign." There may be the smell of soapuds, as the good wife, with ostentatiously avert face and a busy corner in her eye,
subjects the windows to the armstrong treatment, but that, too, is innocuous. But this is the smell that love resents, for love is life, and it is the smell of death:

THE SMELL OF ROTTING GAR-BAGE IN THE ALLEY.

There is where the germs are frolick-ing. There is where the flies are incubating. From there comes the fly, bearing the germ, to inoculate
you while you swat.

All this by way of preparing to put
the situation up to the city health department. The garbage is festering in the alleys of La Crosse TO-DAY. Why? Because the city does not begin to dispose of garbage until the middle of May. April 1st would be better, a lot better. The malignancy of the stuff depends upon the weather, but almost every year April
has some hot days, while some years
every April day is a germ breeder,
and always the first fifteen days of
May make germs and flies.

We understand that some cities continue the disposal of garbage the year round. Perhaps we can't come to that just yet, but CAN WE NOT BEGIN TO GET RID OF OUR GAR-BAGE NOT LATER THAN THE MIDDLE OF APRIL?

Submitted somewhat in the interest of the public health, but primarily, of course, to save that boy and girl in the hammock from any possible infringement of typhoid bacilli
upon the rights of the osculatory
germ.

HOW TO LIVE TO A RIPE OLD AGE

Physicians have been discussing the assertion of Dr. Frank Ellsworth Allard, professor of physical economics at the Boston University Medical college, that the human race should reach the century mark. This is what Dr. Allard said:

"The Old Biblical passage anent
the life of man being three score
years and ten is put into our head at Sunday school, and we later accept it as a matter of course. It is unfortunate that we have the limit of life in mind; we ought to live to be 100. All disease is a process of disintegration.

"I believe that every disease of every name and nature begins primarily in the breaking of some of nature's laws. I believe the body may be so trained as to become a perfect servant of the will. The keeping of nature's laws is the most perfect
form of morality.

"The old line practitioner is bound to pass. The family doctor, as we know him today, is doomed to extinction. His place will be taken by the physician who will fulfill the real meaning of the word, which is
'teacher.'"

In the discussion of Dr. Allard's remarks, physicians have dwelt particularly upon two facts:

First, that mental condition is to a great extent the keynote to illness.

Second, that the present day physician is teaching how to prevent disease rather than giving medicine.

Some believe, with Dr. Allard, that the family physician must pass, others declare he can never be entirely replaced, because he inspires confidence, but that he must learn to teach hygiene and to consult specialists on matters in which he has only mediocre knowledge.

Along with the theory that mental condition is to a great extent the keynote to illness, several prominent medical authorities advise old persons to forget the Biblical story about three score and ten being the time allotted to man here on earth.

They declare that in itself is bad mental training. They advise the old to associate with the young and they will remain young from youthful example. On the other hand, they advise young people not to associate entirely with the old, as any young person who is placed where he can meet
only the aged, will die before his time.

AMONG THE RUINS OF PERISHED AMBITIONS

When the steam roller had passed,
the victors in the recent city election viewed with keen satisfaction the flattened figures of a number of aldermen strewn along its path, and it was a source of merriment among them that the flattest of the flat was Alderman Paul Mahoney. Paul had been taken from all his "important"
committees, and had been made chairman of the "obscure" and "trifling" committee on public schools.

Of course this committee in no way measures up to the "importance" of the committee on licenses,
but by sheer force of the fact that nearly a quarter of the entire output of city taxes is invested in the building, maintenance and operation of our schools, a few shallow minded citizens are impelled to regard the committee on schools as of significance sufficient to warrant the expense of including the names of the committeemen in the published list
of city institutions.

Of course among substantial minded folk it will be recognized that there is no warrant for thus exalting the committee on schools. However, if Mr. Mahoney's hypnotic faculty for turning defeat into victory has not deserted him, we may look to see the redoubtable alderman from the Nineteenth make a valorous pretense of taking seriously the catacombs committee in which his mummied form
has been stowed away.

And there's our friend, Art Worth.
Perhaps no gent who of recent years
has catapulted into office has enjoyed—or suffered—a more strenuous induction into the mysteries of statesmanship. A man who, in La Crosse, mistakes the water wagon
for the band wagon, lacks a properly cultivated thirst, and if he takes amiss resentment by his constituents
and their official allies for that he dickered their birthright for a mess
of pottage, he is wanting in that sense of humor that is the saving grace of politics.

Just for that, Art, with due and elaborate ceremony, was buried in the graveyard (figuratively speaking) of the committee on public health.

That's handing it to a poor devil!
Think of making a real man fritter
away his time with such inconse-quent considerations as the lives and health of the people!

But, at that, Mr. Worth might put up a daring pretense of importance for his committee, and thus mitigate the stigma of the innocuous desue-
tude into which he has fallen.

It has been good sport, and as good sports Paul and Art should applaud the refinement of humiliation heaped upon them. A sensible show of the "Yu gotta giv'to 'em" spirit
may result in their rehabilitation,
and the experience may teach them
in future to recognize the procession and get in line. But let no upstart whisper an insinuation that there is in the character of the "punishment"
heaped upon these two innocents
any suggestion of a perverted conception of relative values in municipal institutions. Indeed, in this particular we must all concede to the city fathers the finest discrimination
—from the utilitarian angle.

It seems as though somebody
must have thrown a monkey wrench into the works of the "system" in New York. A coal dealer was held up and robbed there recently.

Those English suffragists certainly are unreasonable. When they are in prison they refuse to open their mouths. When they are out, they refuse to close them.

The elixir of youth is said to have been discovered in radium. Making some people live forever is another stunt to discourage a husband.

All a fraternal society has to do to increase its membership is to adopt a uniform and sword attachment.

Picking a wife is like using a telephone. Sometimes you don't get the right number.

Apparently the Christmas present
the least used is the hand made Bible
mark.

Every man who plants garden seed
in a city backyard is another evidence of the country's optimism.

Quips and Cranks and Wanton Wiles

Hymn for a Progressive Nation
Great and fair is she, our Land,
High of heart and strong of hand;
Dawn is on her forehead still,
In her veins youth's arrowy thrill.

Hers are riches, might and fame;
All the earth resounds her name;
In her roadsteads navies ride;
Hath she need of aught beside?

Power Unseen, before her eyes
Nations fall and nations rise.
Grant she climb not to her goal
All-forgetful of the Soul!

Firm in honor be she found,
Justice-armed and mercy-crowned.
Blest in labor, blest in ease,
Blest in noiseless charities.

Unenslaved by things that must
Yield full soon to moth and rust,
Let her hold a light on high
Men unborn may travel by.

Mightier still she shall stand,
Moulded by Thy secret hand,
Power Eternal, at whose call Nations rise and nations fall.
—William Watson.

Would Take a Chance

A certain man who lives in a suburban town in north Jersey is no beauty. He is not only long and angular, but has a face and complexion
that neither pale blue, sky yellow
nor any other color in dress effect
will atone to.

One day the aforesaid party called to see an acquaintance and while waiting for him to appear in the parlor was entertained by the little 8
year old son.

"Well, what do you think of me?"
asked the caller, after conversing several minutes.

Instead of replying the boy turned aside and thoughtfully hung his head.

"You haven't answered me," smilingly persisted the caller. "Aren't you going to tell what you think of me?"

"No, sir," returned the youngster.
"Do you suppose that I want to get a lickin'?"—Philadelphia Telegraph.

One on the Cardinal

During a visit in his churchly capacity through southern Maryland, Cardinal Gibbons was entertained by the Order of Jesuits at Leonardtown.
That part of the state is famed for its diamond back terrapin, canvas-
back duck, oysters, crabs and fish,
and a sumptuous table was spread
before the cardinal.

During the repast, the cardinal
turned to a priest near him and said,
with a twinkle in his eye:

"So this is the way the Jesuits
dine?"

"No, your eminence," replied the priest, "this is the way the cardinal
dine!"—Judge.

A Political Boss

A young lady reporter on a coun-

leading citizens as to their politics.

"May I see the gentleman of the house?" she asked of a large woman
who opened the door at one residence.

"No, you can't," answered the woman decisively.

"But I want to know what party
he belongs to," she pleaded.

"Well, take a good look at me,"
she said sternly. "I'm the party he belongs to."—Judge.

eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not

wet his hands they hurt
him so he could hardly

An Unconventional Step

A writer relates the following incident. A few years after the war
he had occasion to visit Richmond
with his family, and he had secured
the time in the county of Patrick, fifty miles from any railroad station, very few of the darkies in that county
had ever seen a railroad train.

A nurse was a necessary part of the family equipage, and he had secured
the services of a coal black servant about 15 years of age, who was
as quick witted as usual, but was as veritable a Topsy as ever "grewed."

The party took the train at the nearest station, and after a few hours
run a broken rail threw the train off the track. Some of the cars made a revolution down an embankment and some were lodged on its incline at an angle of 45 degrees. Great consternation, of course, ensued. The men were shouting and the women and children screaming. After great difficulty our party scrambled out of the coach on the steep incline of the embankment. Finding no bones broken with wife or little one, the writer, who was surprised at the placid, undisturbed appearance of the nurse, who, holding the baby in her arms, looked upon the scene as if nothing had happened, said:

"Milly, were you much frightened?"

"No, sah," she said, "I thought it always stopped that way."—Harper's Magazine.

The Pace That Kills

A youth of 15 whose father was occasionally given to the use of profanity in his home, contracted the same habit, much to the disturbance
of both his parents.

His mother, concluding that something must be done to prevent it becoming an established habit, made a rule that after a certain date a fine
of 2 cents should be paid her for every profane word used. Owing, however, to the fact that all the family were good Universalists, a compromise was reached on the words "devil" and "hell," the fine for these being placed at 1 cent.

The first night's settlement found
the father owing 2 cents and the son
5 cents, but nobody had any pennies.
The son refused to pay his part unless his father paid also. Finally when all hope of an adjustment had passed, the son spoke up. "Say, dad, be a sport. Go to it; make it even 5 cents—you can get two damns and a hell for a nickel."—Life.

"By God, you're pretty!" he cried.

"What do you mean?" she asked
quietly.

"Mean—don't you know that I love you? Have I got to make it plain that I care for you—that you are everything to me?" he asked,
bending toward her.

"So you care a great deal about me, do you, Andy?" she asked slowly.

"I like to hear you call me that!"
he said with a deep breath.

"What is it, Andy—what do you want?" she continued.

"You—you!" he said hoarsely;
his face was white, he had come to the end of long days of hope and doubt; he had battered down every obstacle that stood in his path and he was telling her of his love, nor did she seem unwilling to hear him.

"You are the whole thing to me! I have loved you always—ever since I first saw you! Tell me you'll quit this place with me—I swear I'll make you happy—"

His face was very close to hers,
and guessing his purpose she snatched away her hand. Then she laughed.

As the sound of her merriment
fell on Gilmore's startled ears, there swiftly came to him the consciousness that something was wrong.

"You and your love-making are very funny, Mr. Gilmore, but there is one thing you don't seem to understand. There is such a thing as taste in selection even when it has ceased to be a matter of morals. I don't like you, Mr. Gilmore. You amused me, but you are merely tiresome now."

She spoke with deliberate contempt, and his face turned white and then scarlet, as if under the sting of a lash.

"If you were a man—" he began,
infuriated by the insolence of her speech.

"If I were a man, I should be quite able to take care of myself.
Understand, I am seeing you for the last time—"

"Yes, by God, you are!" he cried.

His face was ashen. He had come to his feet, shaken and uncertain. It was as if each word of hers had had been a stab.

"I am glad we can agree so perfectly on that point. Will you kindly close the hall door as you go out?"

She turned from him and took up a book from the table at her elbow. Gilmore moved toward the door, but paused irresolutely. His first feeling of furious rage was now tempered by a sense of coming loss. This was to be the end; he was never to see her again! He swung about on his heel. She was already turning the leaves of her book, apparently oblivious of his presence.

"Am I to believe you—" he faltered.

She looked up and her eyes met his. There was nothing in her glance to indicate that she comprehended the depth of his suffering.

"Yes," she said, with a drawing
in of her full lips.

"When I leave you—if you really mean that—it will be to leave Mount Hope!" said he appealingly.

The savage vigor that was normally his had deserted him, his very pride was gone; a sudden mistrust of himself was humbling him;
he felt wretchedly out of place; he was even dimly conscious of his own baseness while he was for the moment blinded to the cruelty of her conduct. Under his breath he cursed himself. By his too great haste, by a too great frankness, he had fooled away his chances with her.

"That is more than I dared hope," Evelyn rejoined composedly.

"If I've offended you—" began Gilmore.

"Your presence offends me," she interrupted and looked past him to the door.

"You don't mean what you say—Evelyn—" he said earnestly.

"My cook might have been flattered by your proposal; but why you should have thought I would be, is utterly incomprehensible."

Gilmore's face became livid for an instant. As form of abuse rushed to his lips but he held himself in.

To Absorb Freckles and Other Blemishes

Every spring I receive many letters from girls seeking some reliable recipe for removing freckles. Last year I advised many to try mercolized
wax. Such favorable results were reported that this season I have recommended nothing else for the purpose. The wax seems to possess unusual properties which completely absorb every freckle, with no harmful effect. The complexion improves wonderfully, becoming as soft as a rose petal, and as delicately tinted.

Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any druggist, spread a thin layer of it over the entire face every night for awhile, washing this off in the morning. For rough, red skin, sal-lowness, blackheads, pimples, and all cutaneous blemishes, this treatment
is superior to any that has ever come under my observation.

Springtime also brings wrinkles to many sensitive skins that are much exposed to winds and changing temperatures. Pour a half pint witch hazel into a basin, then an ounce of powdered saxolite, which quickly dissolves. Bathe the face in this; the effect on a wrinkled skin is remarkable.—Marie Demarest in Ladies' Favorite Magazine.

Scrubbing Unnecessary

sanitary. Enamelled surfaces do not require rub-

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE.

The House of Cards.

The long day had been devoted to the choosing of the twelve men who should say whether John North was innocent or guilty, but at last court adjourned and Marshall Langham, pushing through the crowd that was emptying itself into the street, turned away in the direction of his home.

For no single instant during the day had he been able to take his eyes from his father's face. He had heard almost nothing of what was said, it was only when the coldly impersonal tones of the judge's voice reached him out of what was to him silence, that he was stung
to a full comprehension of what was going on about him. The faces of the crowd had blended until they were as indistinguishable as the face of humanity itself. For him
there had been but the one tragic presence in that dingy room; and now—as the dull gray winter twilight enveloped him—wherever he turned his eyes, on the snow-covered pavement, in the bare branches of the trees—there he saw, endlessly repeated, the white drawn

face of his father

SCIENTIST FORESEES WHITE PLAGUE'S END

Professor Metchnikoff.

Lecturing recently in Paris, Professor Metchnikoff, the famous scientist, declared that tuberculosis was decreasing, and had been doing so steadily for the last forty years. This satisfactory state of affairs, the professor said, was particularly noticeable in London, Boston, Copenhagen and Hamburg. Tuberculosis will probably disappear, the professor declared, in the same way as leprosy, which has long ceased to be contagious.

JAIL LODGERS NOT ANXIOUS TO WORK

The Rubber Mills company, being short of men employees, conceived the idea of applying to North side police station No. 2 for men, with the result that out of the lodgers that were sheltered in the station last night, only one took advantage of the opportunity.

Four men slept in the station last night, an unusually small number, and when Patrolman Alois Yehle proposed that they accept jobs in the Rubber Mill, they all declined, saying that they had urgent business elsewhere.

FIRE IN VACANT HOUSE YESTERDAY

Fire department No. 4 was called out yesterday afternoon at 3:30 to extinguish a fire which started from an unknown cause in a house owned by W. Hall, at 1609 Prospect street. When the department reached the house, which is a one-story frame building, they found it entirely in flames, but as there was no wind to hinder their work, they were only about an hour putting the flames out. No one was living in the house. The loss is estimated to be about $400.

Flowers on Wrong Grave. After periodical pilgrimages extending over 15 years to the cemetery at Beeston, J. Daniels of Nottingham was informed by the local urban council, under whose control it is, that during all this time he has been visiting and placing flowers on the wrong grave. The blunder, they said, was due to a former sexton getting the numbers of the graves mixed in entering them in his book.—London Chronicle.

ROLLER SKATERS FALL; ARE INJURED

Within the last three days three injuries have occurred to North side residents from skating on sidewalks with roller skates.

Thursday afternoon Sever Gunderson, 1117 Avon street, fell on the sidewalk on Rose and St. Cloud street while skating, badly spraining his ankle. He is confined to his bed.

Thursday morning Miss Nina Shumway, 827 St. James street, seriously sprained her knee, which has confined her to her bed.

Guy de Maupassant as a Clerk. Guy de Maupassant's manner of life as a junior clerk in the French education office is the subject of an interesting article by one of his old colleagues. We gather that he abated himself from his duties on the ground of illness on an average about three days a week, and that was how he obtained leisure for literary composition. None the less he was very anxious to retain his clerkship until his literary prospects were secure.—Westminster Gazette.

FIFTY-CAR LIMIT BILL IS SHELVED

The fifty-car limit bill which railroad employees throughout the state have tried to have passed was laid on the shelf Thursday, in the assembly at Madison. Railroad men have held that a freight train of over fifty cars cannot be safely handled with a crew of five men. The railroad companies state that if they had to cut down their trains to fifty cars, it would necessitate the putting on of double the amount of trains that are now in operation and that the expense would be too heavy for them.

FROGMAKERS QUIT AT TOMAH SHOP

TOMAH, Wis., April 19.—Frog shops of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway company here, at which the "frogs" for the entire system are made, were closed today when fifty expert "frogmakers" walked out on a demand for higher wages and for the removal of a foreman they disliked.

Other employees were unable to proceed without the "frogmakers" and the plant was shut down. There has been no disorder. The serious feature of the affair is the possibility that if the dispute is long continued the supply of "frogs" for track crossings will run short.

BALKAN ALLIES ACCEPT TERMS

Powers' Proposals to which Turks Agree to Meet
Approval of Alliance

LONDON, April 19.—The ambassadors expect to receive today the formal acceptance by the Balkan allies of the powers' last peace proposals, and the end of the long Balkan war is believed in sight.

A dispatch from Sofia said that Premier Guchoff stated that the Bulgarian government has accepted the powers' offer, with reservations. The premier indicated that these reservations are slight and may be adjusted. It was understood that Bulgaria spoke for all the allies and that their acceptance would reach the powers, through the ambassadors today.

Turkey recently signified her willingness to abide by the proposal of the powers. Internal strife among the allies may postpone absolute peace in the near east for some time.

THREE DEAD IN WELL

WOMAN KILLS HER TWO CHILDREN AND HERSELF—ALL BODIES FOUND IN OLD CISTERN

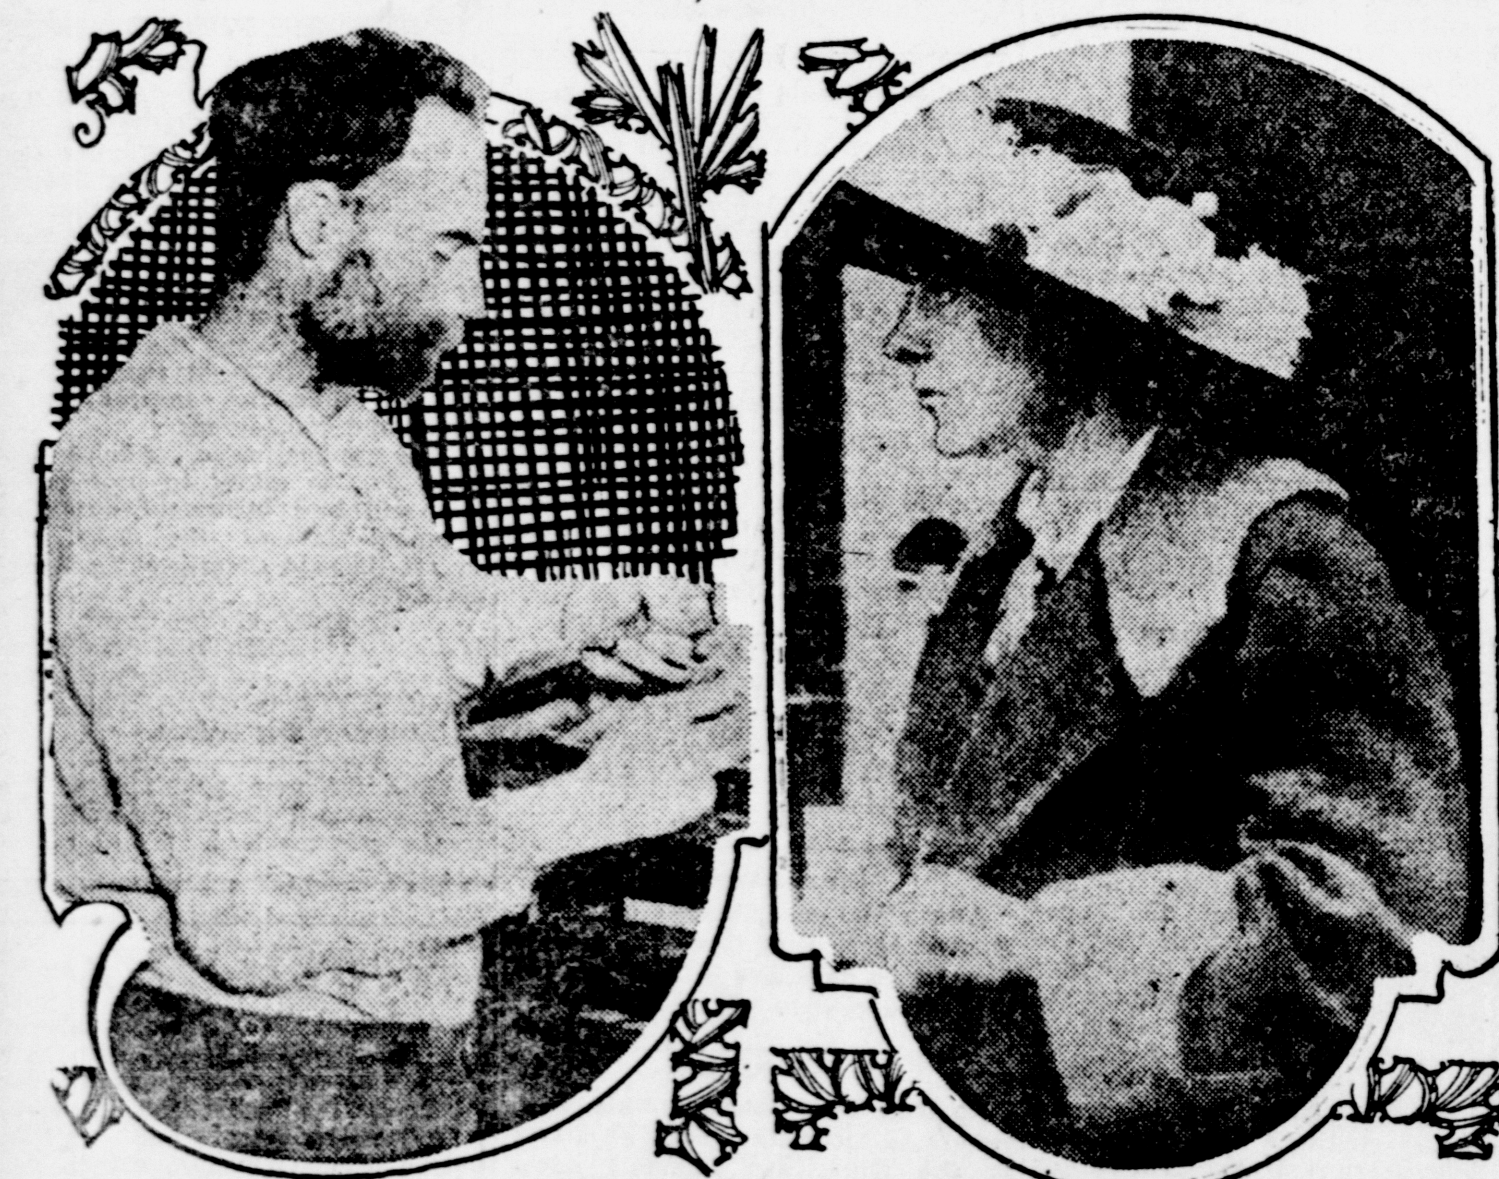

ELGIN, Ill., April 19.—The bodies of Mrs. Maud Sleep and her two children, Orville, 2, and Sarah, 4, for whom farmers have been searching since Tuesday, were found today in an abandoned cistern a short distance from the Sleep farm, near here. A bullet hole through the woman's brain led the police to believe that she has first killed the two infants and then had committed suicide.

The necks of the two infants were broken and their skulls crushed, evidently with the stock of the revolver. The position of the bodies indicated that the woman had first killed the babies, dropped them into the bottom of the cistern twenty-five feet below, and then had ended her life after climbing down a rope.

Edward F. Smith setting type for prison paper, and his wife leaving jail after visit with him.

Declaring that a principle is involved and that he will not pay a fine, Edward F. Smith, wealthy Socialist editor, has settled down to spend sixty days in an Ohio jail. He is still keeping his hand in the newspaper business, however, prison authorities having assigned to him the job of setting type for the prison paper. Smith's wife, who was his stenographer before their marriage, visits him often at the jail. The fine was imposed upon Smith by the Warrensville (Ohio) authorities for breach of military law during the recent flood.

TWO HURT IN AUTO CRASH LAST NIGHT

Parker-Hirt Livery Auto
Smashed when Skittish
Colt Dashes Into
Side

Cass Clement, chauffeur for the Parker-Hirt company, and a young woman whose identity is withheld by the company, were injured last night in a collision between an automobile driven by Clement and a horse driven by Francis Keppel, a farmer on the South Salem road. Clement and the young woman were badly cut about the face by flying glass from the broken windshield.

The accident occurred on the South Salem road about three miles from the city limits, about 8 o'clock last night. The automobile was going out the road, and met Keppel driving at what is known as "death curve." The horse was being driven for the second time in its life, and when the machine came up it became frightened. As the auto passed at a speed of about twenty miles an hour the horse swerved suddenly toward it and crashed into the side.

One of the hills passed through the windshield and tore it loose, and the impact of the horse smashed all one side of the auto's body. The horse was turned completely around, and one of the hills as well as the harness was broken.

Clement declares that he was occupying only seven feet of the road, which is twenty-eight feet wide at the point of the collision. He drove the car back to town, the injury being entirely to the body of the machine. Joseph Hirt, manager of the garage, said today that there was $400 damage to the car, the body being irreparably wrecked.

By winning last night Mr. Gelatt earns the honor of having his name engraved upon the club shield as 1911 winner. The individual who wins the title three times becomes the owner of the shield.

TRIAL WILL TEST FURSTMAN'S POWER

Dairy Man Accused of Keeping Cow Barn in Unsanitary Condition
Asks Jury Trial

CASE TO BE HEARD MONDAY

Health Commissioner De-
plores Necessity of Resorting to Courts to Enforce Orders

The power of the city health department to compel milk dealers and the owners of dairies to observe the rules of sanitation will be given a severe test in county court Monday morning when the case of the state versus Nels Jensen, the owner of a dairy at 2525 Mormon Coulee road, comes up for trial. The complaint was sworn out by Health Commissioner Dr. J. M. Furstman and charges Jensen with keeping his cow barn in an unsanitary condition. Jensen has employed the services of Attorney William Wolfe, and when arraigned in court last Monday he demanded a jury trial. A jury will be drawn Monday morning.

The warrant was sworn out by Dr. Furstman after a trip of inspection at which time samples of the Jensen dairy milk were taken for analysis and, according to Dr. Furstman, after several warnings. The last time Dr. Furstman visited the Jensen dairy he took a photographer with him and several pictures were taken to show the condition of the barn and the milk cows. The photographs exhibited by the health department show several cows covered with filth and will be introduced as evidence at the trial Monday.

"The department regrets that it is compelled to go to the courts to insure pure milk to the consumers of La Crosse," said Dr. Furstman today, "and it would not do so if the milk dealers would show a reasonable amount of willingness to co-operate with the health department. We felt, however, that the food of babies is too important a matter to allow our attitude to be influenced by the complaints of dealers. The health of a baby depends on its food and milk is the most important food of the baby. The baby's food will not be contaminated by filth if we can help it. It is just as easy to keep the dairy in a sanitary condition as otherwise, and it is to the best interests of the dealers to keep them that way."

Dr. Furstman hastened to add: "The large majority of the milk dealers and dairy owners are more than willing to conform to the rules of sanitation and do everything they can to assist us in our work and for those men I have nothing but praise."

"It has come to my ears that a milk dealer recently made the statement, 'We will drive that health department doctor out of the city if he persists in butting into our affairs,' and for this man of course I have no praise."

Mr. Jensen declares that he recently bought the dairy and has been unable because of insufficient time to complete his intended improvements. He asserts that the samples of milk taken by the health commissioner were taken before the milk was strained and that he always strained the milk before delivering it.

Judging from the number that attended court at the time Jensen was arraigned, many of the milk dealers of the city and surrounding territory will be interested spectators at the trial Monday.

PLAYS GREAT GAME AT FIRST FOR REDS

Dick Hoblitzel.

Dick Hoblitzel, as the fans call him, "Hobby," is expected to have one of his big seasons with the Cincinnati Reds this year. He looked like one of the best first-sackers in the National League last season, with a batting average of .294 in 148 games and a fielding percentage of .985. He seems in even better shape than ever this spring, and is counted on to be the end man in a series of double plays, Tinker-to-Hoblitzel, which will make the old Chicago Cub combination of Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance look undiced.

OTTO BRODIE DIES WHEN PLANE FALLS

Noted Aviator Killed by a Fifty-foot Drop when Motor Crushes His Skull

CHICAGO, April 19.—Otto Brodie, 25, noted aviator, was killed instantly when the biplane he was flying fell fifty feet to the ground at the Standard aviation field, West 63rd street and Fifty-sixth avenue at noon today. His head and skull were crushed by the motor.

With several other birdmen, Brodie took advantage of the warm weather today and visited the flying grounds where the James Gordon Bennett cup trials were held last year.

A biplane was assembled and Brodie started aloft. He sped about the field once and then tilted the planes upward.

As the machine shot upward, Brodie attempted to drive it clear of the big tree at the edge of the flying field. The branches caught one of the planes and the air-craft executed a somersault and shot toward the ground, turning over again in its fall.

He died a few minutes after fellow aviators lifted the heavy motor from his body. Brodie was the first Chicagoan to take up aviation. Four years ago he was the chauffeur of a motor truck, established by the city health department. Attracted by the flying game he entered the employ of the Farnham Biplane company. He was not a sensational flyer, was always careful and was never before in a serious accident. He leaves a wife and three small children.

Mr. Forrer said today that the trees will add much to the beauty of the north side playground and he added that he got them ridiculously cheap.

PAST FIFTY? YOU NEED "CASCARETS"

What glasses are to weak eyes, Cascarets are to weak bowels. Try a 10-cent box.

Most old people must give to the bowels some regular help, else they suffer from constipation. The condition is perfectly natural. It is just as natural as it is for old people to walk slowly. For age is never so active as youth. The muscles are less plastic. And the bowels are muscles.

So all old people need Cascarets. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect this gentle aid to weak bowels. The bowels must be kept active. This is important at all ages, but never so much as at fifty.

Age is not a time for harsh physics. Youth may occasionally whip the bowels into activity. But a lash can't be used every day. What the bowels of the old need is a gentle and natural tonic. One that can be constantly used without harm. The only such tonic is Cascarets and they cost only 10 cents per box at any drug store. They work while you sleep.

CHURCH NEWS

The Successor Of Pope Pius X

While the populace has given its attention to the illness of Pope Pius X, Catholic leaders both in the hierarchy and of it, royalty at all capitals of Europe, and public men of Italy in all walks, have given attention to the next pope, who he will be and what policies will govern him. It is agreed in all quarters that there is at present far less degree of certainty than obtained at the deaths of either Pius IX or Leo XIII. A wide field for choice of men, and a probability that nearly present policies will continue seems to be the situation. A few things stand out, however, and can be set down as fixed. Here they are:

The next pope will be an Italian, and he will be one who is familiar with Spain and a friend of Spain. It is idle to speculate about other than an Italian being chosen. Political reasons make an Italian necessary now as they have done for three hundred years, first because of temporal power, and second because of attitude of the present Italian government. A pope of French, German or Austrian nationality could not be chosen, and as for an American, to be frank America is distrusted by reason of its size and power, its possible innovations, its very progressiveness. The Catholic church regards its precedents. It changes less rapidly than Americans. None but an Italian will therefore be new successor of St. Peter.

The next pope of Rome is in the following list of twelve prelates:

Cardinal DeLai, bishop of Sabina.
Cardinal Ferrari, archbishop of Milan.

Cardinal Ferrata, one of the great administrators of the Curia.

Cardinal Richelmy, archbishop of Turin.

Cardinal Cavalari, patriarch of Venice.

Cardinal Lorenzelli, the diplomat of the Curia.

Cardinal Maffi, archbishop of Pisa.

Cardinal Luaidi, archbishop of Palermo.

Cardinal Gasparri, the canonist of the Curia.

Cardinal Lugari, who had a business training in early life.

Cardinal Vico, of the Curia, after long service in Spain.

Cardinal Boschi, archbishop of Ferrara.

Will Hold Over 1200 Missionary Conventions

The country is to have another big series of missionary conventions. It is announced by the Laymen's Missionary movement that it will undertake to hold no fewer than 1,200 conventions between September 15 and February 15 next, and it calls upon ministers and laymen in all parts of the country to join it. The movement will try to hold conventions in all towns of 5,000 population and over, and it proposes a great number of teams of speakers, four to six men in each, to go from city to city, two days in each. Missions of all kinds are to be propagated, not simply foreign missions as the movement essayed when it started a few years ago.

Dayton to Aid of Come to Branch

United Brethren, whose 300,000 members are in greatest numbers in Ohio and Pennsylvania, are coming to the financial aid of their publishing house at Dayton. This house, one of the best in any religious body, withstood the flood and fire although in the midst of both for days. Missionary societies, their headquarters in the building, suffered little, but the loss to the publication house, in stock, machinery and income, will reach $125,000, possibly more. There has been influence exerted to induce removal from Dayton to some city less likely to be flooded in future. It is understood, however, that leaders refuse to listen to removal.

The manner of the financial relief in the loan of small sums, without interest, for one and two years. Apart from that, many small gifts are being received. Funds in hands of ministers and treasurers of churches, belonging to the publication board, are being rushed to Dayton. It is reported, and indications are that the department will be, within a short time, in almost the same forlorn condition it was before the flood came. In common with others, United Brethren are finding that the damage to churches in Dayton and other cities affected by the flood is

Patriot's Day

Nehemiah 4, 14

"Fight for your brethren, your sons, and your daughters, your wives and your houses."

The little patriot band on Lexington's green came as near following the injunction of the Scripture as man can come. It will be a better day for us when Patriots Day is more generally recognized by all our people. For the teaching of pure patriotism, a more perfect privilege could not be given. Jacob's Meeting With Esau. Gen. xxxii:3—xxxiii:17.

Golden Text—Be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving each other, even as God also in Christ forgave you. Eph. iv:32.

(1) Verses 3-5—What were the circumstances in connection with Jacob's leaving his father's home some twenty-one years previous?

(2) What are the possibilities of a guilty conscience in inflicting punishment?

(3) Verses 6-8—In view of God's forgiveness and his promise to protect him why was Jacob afraid?

(4) Verses 9-12—When we are in fear what is the best thing to do?

(5) What are the elements of true prayer, taking this prayer of Jacob as a model?

(6) To what extent is material prosperity a sign of God's special favor?

(7) In what way have God's promises to Jacob been fulfilled?

(8) Verses 13-23—If Jacob had not injured Esau in the past and therefore were not now afraid of him would he have made him such valuable gifts? Why?

(9) What would be the probable and natural effect upon Esau in seeing this vast number of animals coming to him at intervals as presents?

(10) What would be the probable value of these animals which Jacob sent as presents to Esau today?

(11) Show the skill and tact which Jacob displays in this incident and say what suggestion there is in it for us.

(12) Verses 24-31—It would appear that the man who wrote this narrative thought of God as a physical being, but was Jacob's wrestle with God physical or spiritual? Why? (See Eph. vi:12.)

(13) What takes place when a man wrestles with God?

(14) In this spiritual contest how did Jacob know when he had prevailed?

(15) If we the sufficiently in earnest to take every grave problem or serious difficulty to God and wrestle with him until we get the answer may we be sure of victory? Why?

(16) Chap. xxxiii:1-7—Would you say that Esau displayed this affection for Jacob from his own original choice, or had he been influenced by God and the presents? Why?

(17) Did Jacob even now show that he had absolute confidence in God's answer to his prayer?

(18) Is there such a thing as absolute confidence at the time of a dangerous crisis until it is over?

(19) Verses 8-11—Was Esau's display of unwillingness to take the presents real?

(20) Verses 12-17—Which gives us the more trouble, anticipated or realized calamity? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Domestic Hints

(From The Scotch-American)

To boil a cracked egg wrap it in a piece of paper, and this will prevent the white from boiling out.

To cleanse gilt frames wipe softly with a sponge damped with spirits of wine or oil of turpentine, and allow to dry off themselves.

After putting colored clothes through the wringer rub the rollers with a cloth saturated in paraffin. This will remove all color from them.

Ordinary tea does not agree with everyone especially people with weak digestions. It causes heartburn and other symptoms of acute dyspepsia.

To stop a leak in a gas or water pipe beat some whiting up in some yellow soap. Well rub into the leak, and you will find it will stop it when other things have failed.

Those who wish to preserve their sight should preserve their general health by correct habits of living, and give their eyes just work enough, with a due degree of light.

To remove mud stains from black silk or woolen dresses first let the material become perfectly dry, and then brush off the mud. Any stain that remains should be washed with a piece of flannel dipped in hot coffee to which a little ammonia has been added.

Would Do What He Could

The legislature of a western state contains this year several women members. At a recent banquet they were invited to speak, but all with one accord began to make excuses, and one of the men was asked to represent them. He accepted, saying that he was willing to do so, so far as in him lay, but that his case was similar to that of a naughty little girl who was told that if she didn't behave she would be shut up in the chicken coop.

"You can shut me up in the chicken coop if you want to," replied she, "but I ain't going to lay any eggs."—Judge.

Not an Appetizer

Henry Watterson told this story at a recent dinner party: "One day when I was city editor of a small newspaper a fine turkey was left at the office. We all hankered after the bird, the editor finally claimed it, took it home, and had it cooked for dinner. The next day a letter was handed him, which he opened and read:

"Mr. Editor: I sent you a turkey yesterday which had been the cause of much dispute among us. To settle a bet, will you please state in tomorrow's issue what the turkey died of?"

IN THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Miss Inez Milholland, the New York Suffrage leader who is regarded as the most beautiful woman in the ranks of the "votes for women army," is now a full fledged lawyer. She was admitted to the New York bar on April 14th.

More than 200 members of the Woman Suffrage party of Cleveland, heeding the call for relief workers during the Ohio floods, organized a sewing bee in quarters loaned by the Y. W. C. A., and with other workers made 1400 wrappers, blankets, petticoats and other articles needed by the destitute. In one afternoon 500 garments were turned out complete.

Elsie McKenzie, a suffragist who has practiced the "hunger strike" in Holloway jail, London, recently drew further attention to herself and "the cause" in New York by chalking notices of a suffrage meeting on the sidewalks all the way down Fifth avenue, from Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont's Political Equality headquarters on Forty-first street to Thirty-fourth street and back up Broadway.

Miss Genevieve Champ Clark, daughter of Speaker and Mrs. Clark, who has made a study of American political lore and theories, will make a special theory of European governments the object of a tour of the continent on which she has just started from New York.

Long hat pins are "tabooed" in Berlin as well as America. The Berlin police have adopted a regulation providing a fine of $15 for women who fail to discard the protruding "hat spike" or provide protectors for the points.

A unique campaign in behalf of votes for women will be inaugurated by the New York Woman Suffrage association the first of next month. A band of suffragists will "strike the trail" in a prairie schooner, and visit every corner of the state. The sides of the schooner will proclaim "Votes for Women" and "New York, 1915." Mrs. Marie Wilson Lee will drive, and her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Nelson Andrews, will make addresses whenever opportunity arises. Three college girls will distribute literature, make speeches and do the cooking. The pioneers will wear "cow girl" costumes.

She Heard a Knock
A story of extraordinary deafness was recently related at a meeting of a medical society in Philadelphia. An elderly lady, exceedingly hard of hearing, lived near the river. Then she smoothed her dress, brushed back her hair, and said sweetly: "Come in."—Everybody's Magazine.

RADIUM IS SUBJECT AT SCIENCE MEET

The Work of Jacques Loeb Provokes an Interesting Discussion

At the fourth monthly meeting of the La Crosse Science club held last night at the normal school, an interesting and instructive program was presented. Prof. Layton Gouldin of the department of chemistry of the high school gave a comprehensive discussion of “Radium and other radio-active substances” in which he reviewed the progress of development along that line of research.

In order to live one hundred years one should pick his ancestors 100 years before he is born. Dr. R. H. Herbert read a scholarly paper on “Premature Old Age,” in which the foregoing statement was made. Arterio-sclerosis, or hardening of the arteries, was given as the chief cause of age and Dr. Herbert suggested several preventive measures.

Miss Sonia Ladoff of the normal school biology department, in an able review of the work of Jacques Loeb, gave an interesting talk and explained hitherto often misunderstood facts regarding the great biologist who is endeavoring to unify scientific thought by his mechanistic conception of life. A hearty discussion followed her paper, clergy, laity and professional men taking part.

Prof. J. A. Fairchild of the department of physics, traced the early history of the science of physics up to the time of the Renaissance period.

VIROQUA, WIS.

Mrs. Jim Hayes passed away Wednesday morning when apparently in good health. She complained of not feeling well in the morning but did not think it necessary to call a doctor. She was left alone in the house and after a while neighbors saw her out in the road, waving a signal. By the time they could reach her she had dropped dead. The receiver of the telephone was down which led them to think she had tried to call for help but had been unable to talk. Five years ago her husband died in a similar manner.

Oil Drilling by Hand.
Oil exists in great quantities in Siam, but the methods of securing it are exceedingly crude. The wells are not more than six feet deep and are dug by hand. The oil secured is that which is baled from the bottom of the well by dippers on long sticks of bamboo. The oil is sold to the natives who live within calling distance of the wells.

Be Honest.
Being honest is the greater part of achievement. When you know that you're doing the best within you, you can't be downed. Self-respect is an eternal life preserver—no matter how often circumstance wrecks you, you're bound to float back to solid ground again. When men strive for posts of trust, they must be somewhat post-like themselves and stand steady.—Herbert Kaufman.

“I suppose you agree that reform is necessary?” “Oh, yes,” replied the political boss. “Reformers introduce a whole lot of legislation that is important to us practical guys because of the amount some people are willing to pay for the privilege of evading it.”

Squeaky Boots.
Often when one has purchased a pair of boots, one doesn't know till they are home that they creak. However, the disagreeable noise may be stopped by taking them back to the shoemaker and asking him to spring them on each side and insert between the soles a teaspoonful of French chalk. This process costs only a trifle and answers admirably.

Wasn't Shocked.

THE TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

THE LOST PRIMA DONNA

By A. MARIA CRAWFORD

Copyright, 1913, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

“Of course, once upon a time, there was a girl,” said Tom Thrane in answer to a question put by one of his sister Caroline's dinner guests. “There is always a girl, you know.”

“Does the fact that you acknowledge there was such a girl explain your long absence from here, Tom?” asked Louise McMillan curiously.

“Fancy a man nowadays having so much sentiment! It's wonderful!” “Not if you really know Tom! We are going to hear ‘La Boheme’ tonight,” Caroline announced, hoping to steer the conversation away from personal channels.

“The music of ‘La Boheme’ invariably makes me sentimental. You can just close your eyes, Tom, and see the girl that you loved before you went to Alaska if the opera affects you as it does me. Do any of us know her? Has she married?” questioned Margaret Simmonds, who prided herself on keeping up with the news.

“I don't know, Margaret. I only wish that I could tell you.”

“Perhaps we can tell you something about her! Who was she?”

“You mustn't ask that,” said Thrane with one of his boyish smiles that had won him as many friends in the far distant north as he had in the polite society of home. “It wouldn't be fair to her, Margaret. You understand, don't you?”

When the women had left the men Margaret Simmonds's husband laid his hand on Thrane's shoulder. “Margaret doesn't mean to be unkind, Tom. She's just like a lot of women who can scent a romance for a mile. They must have something to think about beside meals and millinery, you know.”

“That's all right, my dear fellow. I am not sensitive.” But a little later in a box at the opera he managed to sit as far as possible from Margaret Simmonds.

The lights, the soft, plaintive music and the fair women about him recalled other days when at the opera in ballrooms and at various social functions, his eyes had been quick to see a certain slender girl with a mass of golden brown hair and the deepest blue eyes in the world. He remembered the last time they were together. It was New Year's eve and he prided himself that she was the most beautiful girl in the gay restaurant. She had worn a curious blue frock, all flimsy and soft, and the jewels at her throat and on her breast flashed like stars in a summer sky. He had leaned toward her and told her that she held the happiness of his New Year and of all his future life, and asked her to marry him. But the smile had faded swiftly from her eyes and lips and she had shaken her head sadly, telling him that he must forget her. He had been fairly stunned at the revelation of her unexpected attitude to him, and within twenty-four hours he was ready for Alaska and a strenuous new life that held no haunting memories.

A tender minor strain from the orchestra smote his inner consciousness and touched some hidden chord that vibrated, flooding his heart with tenderness. Seven years had come and gone, and yet he knew that he had not found the land of forget in his travels and the dream of her was as vitally real as ever.

He spent a restless night. The old time places and the light of mutual friends brought her constantly to his mind. He wondered why nobody mentioned her name. She had been the most popular member of his particular set.

After an early breakfast he started out walking briskly along with no destination in view. He was so absorbed in his own thought that he was not conscious of time or distance until he reached the suburbs of the city. Then the sound of a voice singing a half forgotten love song brought him to a standstill on the pavement. It was Anne Traynor's voice, and he opened a gate and went up a little path bordered with boxwood to a tiny cottage, almost hidden with vines. An old turbaned mammy, who had cared for Annie when she was a baby, answered his ring.

“Fo' de Lord's sake, Mis' Anne, come and see who's here. If it ain't Mr. Tom himself!” she exclaimed, throwing wide the door.

Anne came quickly into the little hall. “I am glad to see you again,” she said, cordially. “How did you find me? I thought that none of the old crowd remembered me or knew where I live now.”

“Did you want to be forgotten, Anne?”

“I had to be,” she answered quietly. “Do you mind telling me what you mean? I have only been home since yesterday.”

“Where have you been, Tom, since—the last time I saw you?”

“In Alaska. I thought you knew that I never could take defeat gracefully. I haven't been able to forget you, even there. I could not possibly have stayed here as things were. Are you—are you married?”

“No, Tom. I'm quite an old maid.” She smiled when she said it, and Tom crossed the room in three strides.

“Anne, tell me what all this means, for you to be here in this tiny cottage. Tell me!”

The door bell rang vigorously and Thrane straightened up from where he leaned over Anne's chair. A big,

DRINK HABIT CURED IN THREE DAYS

An internal treatment, taken by the mouth, that takes away all craving, desire and appetite for liquor in three days, without hypodermic injections—making the former slave to drink, a new man—free from the curse of liquor forever.

THE DRINKING MAN

The drinker is more to be pitied than censured, more to be helped than despised. There are many things in life that are well calculated to drive a man to drink. They are too numerous to mention. We see a man staggering under the influence of liquor. Instantly we condemn him. We do not know what drove him to drink. We are not all alike. It may have been domestic troubles—many a man has been driven to suicide by domestic troubles. It may have been financial embarrassments or business reverses—many a man has been driven insane by financial losses and business complications. It may have been the over persuasion of his friends—many a man has been led to drink by the conviviality of his associates. It may have been his thirst, craving, appetite and burning desire for liquor—many a man has been driven to drink by the all-consuming fire in his stomach. It may have been the condition of his nervous system—many a man after forming the drink habit, has been driven to drink to keep from becoming more nervous. Before we can find the cause we must search the drinker's life. Every living soul in this world has his or her troubles. There is a skeleton in the closet of every family, and the white, grinning bones tell a story of remorse. There comes a time in the history of every person when it seems like the trouble is more than one can bear. That another straw will break the camel's back. When all is dark without and one's life is pent up in gloom, and there is not a single ray of hope left, then the man that has formed the drink habit, turns to the cup to drown his troubles. There is a weak spot somewhere, in every one of us. Each of us have our faults. We are none perfect. You are not your brother's keeper. You have no right to sit in judgment upon the man who drinks. You were never a drinker. You know nothing of the drinker's struggle that may be going on within. If the man who is staggering under the influence of liquor could not get liquor, he might do worse. There are many other vices that are worse than drinking. It was our Saviour who said, “Let him who is without sin cast the first stone.” Be compassionate! We are all born, but none of the living are buried. You do not know what the future holds for you. The drinker who is staggering under the influence of liquor today, in three days can be made a model of sobriety. The vicissitudes of this life are daily working miracles. Speak kindly to the drinker, persuade him to take the Austin Three Day Drink Habit Treatment. It has revolutionized all other systems of treatment for permanently relieving the drinker of that thirst, craving, desire and appetite for liquor. It makes him a new man, in three days, whether the treatment is taken in the Sanitarium or in the home. He then loathes and despises liquor. The very smell or sight of it is repulsive to him. He is through with liquor. No one can induce him to drink. From that time on he is a model of sobriety—a respected and honored citizen, a good husband and a good father. He is daily living the life of a sober man.

The Austin Treatment

The Austin Treatment is an internal remedy, pleasant to take, quick and mild in its action, very effective and thorough in its work of elimination, eradicating every trace of alcoholic poison from the system.

This treatment strengthens and invigorates both mind and body, leaving the patient in a normal condition, so far as the effects of alcohol are concerned.

Appeals to the Busy Man
The Three-Day Treatment appeals to business and professional men because it saves time. If the Austin Austin treatment quiets and steadies other advantage, there is sufficient reason for taking it, in the fact that it can be completed in the Sanitarium at the end of the third day, and the man may resume his business or other occupation. In this respect there is no comparison between the Austin treatment and the old twenty-eight to forty-two day hypodermic injection treatment.

Nervous Drinkers

The nervous drinking man, the man who has to take a drink before breakfast, and two or three after breakfast, and several during the day, to keep from becoming nervous, will find the Austin treatment acts perfectly in just three days. It relieves them entirely of the necessity of drinking for any cause, as it takes away all craving, desire, or physical necessity for liquor in any form. The Austin treatment quiets and steadies the nerves, supplies the nerve centers with that vital force which rebuilds the whole nervous system. It restores the digestive organs, the drinking man's weak point, purifies the blood, eliminating every trace of alcoholic poison from the system in just three days. Thus restoring the drinking man to a normal, mental and physical condition, so far as the effects of alcohol are concerned.

good-looking blond came in without waiting for mammy to open the door.

“I have such fine news, I couldn't stand on ceremony, my dear Anne,” he exclaimed, rushing into the room. “You are engaged to—”

“I am glad to have seen you, Anne,” interrupted Thrane distantly, picking up his hat and came from a chair.

“Mr. Thrane, this is Sir Thomas Peyton,” said Anne graciously. “Sir Thomas helped me get an opportunity to sing for the greatest manager in the world. Tell us the good news!”

“You are to have the leading soprano role in the new Italian opera he is going to produce next season. He is enthusiastic over your voice and more than delighted with your charming personality. Anne has studied abroad for years and yet she would have been content to sing in a church choir if I hadn't come along and forced her out to sing for men who make prima donnas, Mr. Thrane.”

“Sir Thomas's daughter studied when I did in Paris and he has been like a father to me. How can I thank you?” she said, turning to the big Englishman.

“Go to rehearsal in the morning. Good-by, good-by,” and Sir Thomas was gone as abruptly as he had come.

“What does all this mean, Anne?”

“That after years of waiting, I am to have a chance to sing in grand opera. It's splendid, isn't it, Tom?”

“Aren't you going to begin at the beginning and tell me everything?” “You remember we had supper together seven years ago on New Year's eve?”

“I remember.”

“That afternoon, father had called mother and me into his den and told us that he had failed, had lost practically every dollar.”

“And you never told me,” cried Thrane. “Dear, proud little Anne! So that was why you refused me!”

Anne was looking out of the window where the hyacinths and tulips in her flower beds made a brave show of color in the sunlight.

“I knew that you wouldn't want a penniless wife.”

Thrane put his arms around her and turned her face up to his. “Did you love me, Anne?”

“Yes, Tom.”

“Do you love me now?” his tense, quiet voice startled him, for his heart was pounding like a sledgehammer. “Oh, Anne, I love you so! Do you care? Won't you let me try to make you care again?”

“A woman's love is not a light thing to be given and taken at will.” “Oh, my dear!” he cried brokenly, “we'll make up those lost years, we'll make time pay us for every lost hour of happiness. But your career, Anne? What of that?”

“I'll sing to you, sir,” laughed Anne gayly. “But, Tom, I can't go back to the old life here. The people I used to know forgot me when I was poor. I hear that you have accumulated millions. I'm afraid I'm not the wife for you, after all.”

“I, too, hate a life of sham, Anne dear. Your manager can get another prima donna, but there is just one woman in the world for me.”

“How did you happen to find me today?”

“They say that every one of us has a good angel to guide and guard. My angel brought me here.”

CHARMING GOWNS for the SUMMER GIRL

Edited by
MAY MANTON

GOWNS IN SEMI-PRINCESSE STYLE THAT ARE DISTINCTIVE AND EASILY MADE BY THE
HOME DRESSMAKER

LATEST FADS AND FANCIES OF FASHION

Silk coat suits are in great favor and undoubtedly, taffeta is to be worn, but many of the newest and smartest are made of charmeuse and they are really ravishingly beautiful. The material is just heavy enough to be available for street use and to take beautiful folds while it is as soft and supple as chiffon itself. Many of the best dressmakers are trimming suits of this kind with great moderation and entirely with tubing made from the satin. Such treatment is very handsome and seems to suit the material peculiarly well, for the charmeuse is too beautiful in itself to be elaborated to any extent. Too severe styles do not suit it, however, and it is really only adapted to fancy coat suits but these always make an important feature of the bride's outfit. A very beautiful one of the kind is made of the charmeuse in a rich blue, closely resembling royal. The skirt shows one of the latest developments of the envelope idea. It is made in two pieces but with the additional envelope portions sewed in with seams that are lapped over the plain foundation but quite separate therefrom. These are weighted and tucked into place here and there but are not stitched to the skirt to give a stiff effect. At the point of each flap are arranged six disc-like trimmings that consist of fine tubing, coiled round and round to be approximately one inch in diameter, and in the center of each, there is placed a little button. The coat is slightly Empire in style with a plain smoothly fitted lower portion and front and back just a little full above it. It is closed by means of a single big ornament, made entirely of heavy tubing, and a rather unique feature is found in the arrangement of the back. We are having all sorts of one-sided effects this season. To be balanced is to be quite out of style, so far as the dressier costumes are concerned, and the back of this coat is made with a side form at the right side but in one piece at the left. The back is cut across at the high waist line and the upper portion is drawn in with little gathers while the lower is plain and lapped on to the side form, not merely seamed to it for lapped effects continue to be exceedingly smart. Over the seam that joins the full upper with the plain lower portion is arranged a little trimming of tubing that is most effective, and the single note of contrast is found in a very handsome collar of ratine lace in a shade of champagne that is really lovely on the blue. Taffeta, unquestionably, is extremely attractive and much liked and, in some of its colors, it is exquisitely beautiful, but its very popularity has created a demand for other things and the charmeuse mentioned and faille are being extensively used by the best dressmakers.

Blouses for wear with the coat suits of the warm season are always a subject of interest. The entire costume idea and effect is a desirable one, yet there is a daintiness about the blouse made of lace and fine material that is sure to be felt. Some of the latest models sent over to us from Paris have met the two demands in a most interesting way. They are made of soft, pliable linen lace that is durable without being the least heavy and the trimming is of cotton voile in color to match the coat suit. They are very charming and handsome and for the most part, show trimming portions that extend upward from the waist line, thus carrying out the entire costume effect. They are delightfully cool to wear and altogether attractive. A feature is to be found in the almost profuse use of buttons as trimming and in almost every instance, are to be found rows of white buttons sewed on with thread the color of the trimming, these buttons being designed for ornament only, in no way for use. Often the pearl buttons of approximately one-half inch in diameter will be used upon the main portion of the blouse, while tiny ones all of colored voile will be seen upon the yoke and chemise, for the present is essentially a season of buttons and they trim our blouses as well as our gowns.

There has been considerable talk of the Robespierre collar and in certain modified forms, it is to be generally met. The genuine model is to be found upon a few exclusive costumes and is likely to gain in favor with the coming of another season, but it is a little too high and uncomfortable to meet with a very hearty welcome at the opening of summer. The general tendency of the blouse for in-door wear is the collarless neck, but dealers are showing some modified Robespierre collars that are adjustable and which are exceedingly smart for wear upon the street while they will be comfortable for several weeks to come. They are made of satin in various colors, are high and turned over, as a matter of course, and are also open at the front as an inevitable fact, but they are finished with dainty and attractive lace tie ends and are supplemented at the back with an up-standing frill, white frills that are graduated as they approach the front.

Long coats are making a feature of the summer wardrobe. The flat has gone forth that a wrap of some kind we must wear, let the mercury climb where it may; consequently, designers are busy making wraps that will comply with this demand with the least possible discomfort. Such coats are of course designed to be worn for the carriage or afternoon visits and occasions of the kind, and are to be worn over the entire gown. They do not, in any way, take the place of the coat suit. For the most part, they are simple in form, depending upon the beauty of the material and the grace of line and fold for effect, and we see kimono sleeves, set-in sleeves and raglan sleeves in almost equal numbers, although the raglan always seems suited to the motor coat or the one of harder usage. The one essential in a wrap of the kind is that it shall not rumple the gown beneath and we all know that the raglan sleeve is a good one from this point of view, but there is nothing prettier, nothing more practical than the kimono sleeve, for it slips on and off with ease and means no seams to be annoying.

All sorts of statements are constantly being advanced as to their place being usurped by other things, but the best houses continue to make wraps with kimono sleeves and the best dressed women continue to wear them. Wool voile makes an excellent material for these long coats and it is used both with and without a lining. Green and champagne color are favorites and they have the great advantage of being dainty and summer-like in effect while they harmonize with every gown. Heavy lace makes the accepted trimming and it is applied with more or less elaboration to suit the use and the taste of the wearer. The new ratine lace is exceedingly handsome for such purpose and is greatly liked, heavy Venetian has an equal vogue and Macramée is exceedingly smart. Faced satins are ideal for the purpose. A black coat touched with color always is smart over lingerie gowns and some exceedingly attractive wraps are made of black charmeuse lined through with color. In reality, they are cut all in one piece but they are folded and caught together to form sleeves and turned back to form big revers until an exceedingly handsome and even elaborate effect is obtained. For the mountains and sea-shore resorts such wraps will hardly be too warm at any season. Their picturesque and attractive quality is unquestioned. Capes are much affected by the younger contingent and the draped capes of charmeuse lace-trimmed are very beautiful. As piazza and evening wraps, they are really ideal and none of the light coats are really too warm for the afternoon drive taken out of town, unless the day is very warm, but unquestionably, there will be many of thinner, lighter materials, such as chiffon, heavy net and the like, worn during the really hot weather.

The gown that is made in semi-princesse style is a satisfactory one from every point of view. It is thoroughly comfortable, exceedingly smart and is adapted to many different materials. For summer, linens, soft finished piques and fabrics of similar weights are to be extensively worn, made in such way, and taffeta, which lends itself to treatment of the kind, also is liked.

But no one style predominates this season, and gowns made with separate blouse and skirt take equal rank with those that are joined at the waist line.

For the linens, piques and the like, heavy lace and embroidery are exceedingly smart, and the new laces include ratine, which is very handsome, and can be used upon ratine cloth as well as upon the smoother fabrics.

Scalloped edges make a feature. They are both bound and embroidered, and they always give a distinctive effect, while there is the great advantage of choosing the style and size best adapted to the special material.

Plain scallops bound are handsome for plain, heavy stuffs. Fancy scallops embroidered are charming for those of lighter weight.

Combinations of fancy and plain materials are to be much worn. Flowered taffeta with plain makes lovely gowns and a great many gowns of one color are trimmed with another. Among blouses that are especially well liked must be mentioned one the front of which is extended to form its own girdle, while skirts with overlapped fronts, in the envelope style, are among the newest and smartest.

Nothing makes a daintier summer frock than white muslin lace trimmed. This one is made additionally distinctive by the use of baby Irish lace. It is made in semi-princesse style and it includes all the essential features of the season. The waist line is raised, the sleeves are cut in one with the body portion in peasant style and the skirt takes long straight lines without being exaggeratedly narrow. The scalloped line of the belt is a feature, too, and the dress altogether one of the prettiest possible. It would be charming made from marquisette or voile, as well as from muslin, it can be utilized for the thin silks that are made in lingerie style and it will be found just as pretty made from colored material as from white. White could be embroidered with color to give a good effect and there are a variety of laces used this season so that there is exceptional opportunity for variation. The machine-made Alençon laces are exceedingly dainty and charming, and combined with mercerized mull would make a most attractive dress. Marquisette is lovely, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, with Cluny or with baby Irish, and all these laces are equally in vogue. The blouse is a very simple one. The skirt is five-gored and the trimming is all arranged on indicated lines. The model will be found a satisfactory one for small women as well as for young girls.

Simple, straight tunics are still in vogue this season and are always exceedingly attractive. This one is combined with a blouse that can be worn with or without a guimpe. The neck edge can be cut on a round or square or V-shaped outline. The tunic can be gathered into a band or left plain as preferred. Any skirt can be worn beneath.

The blouse is made with sleeves and body portion in one and is laid in two tucks over the shoulders that are exceptionally becoming to girlish figures. The tunic consists of one straight piece, gathered at the upper edge, and the two are joined by means of a belt.

Crêpe de chine is a pronounced favorite this season and it is especially well liked for such frocks as this one. In the illustration it is trimmed with silk and the combination is as smart as possible. The sash is especially worthy of notice for it is tied and finished after the very latest manner. It is made of satin and lined with the same, consequently all the edges are finished. The frock is just the prettiest possible for simple afternoon occasions. The silk yoke and the under-sleeves are exceedingly fashionable. If something still more elaborate is wanted or a dancing frock is desired, the dress can be made with yoke and under-sleeves omitted, and when treated in this way the front of the blouse can be trimmed with an applied portion of lace at the neck edge that gives a very smart and attractive touch. All the pretty soft materials that girls like so much will be found available for the model. Cashmere in light colors is fashionable and exceedingly beautiful. The crêpe de chine illustrated is one of the best liked materials of the season, messaline is greatly in vogue, voile is always pretty and there are others that might be mentioned. For dancing and occasions of the kind the suggestion made is a good one, messaline or chiffon with trimming of lace.

THE VOGUE OF SILKS.

Entire garments of light-weight silks promise to be worn throughout the entire season, or, at least, until really hot weather has arrived. For present wear, taffeta, faille and charmeuse are favorites, and the darker and medium tones prevail; but there are many silks shown that are sufficiently light in weight and cool in effect to be attractive even in July. Black and white striped summer taffetas with flowered borders are lovely and are made into gowns that are really ravishing.

One of the newest models is at once so simple and so distinctive in effect that it is especially worthy of mention. There is a simple three-piece skirt that is closed at the center front and there is a little kimono blouse with elbow sleeves that is also closed at the front, and the two are joined at the waist line. Finishing the straight front edge of both blouse and skirt is a little plaiting of the silk and within the plaiting is set a row of buttons covered with the material. Approximately, four or five inches above the edge of the skirt is arranged a slightly wider plaiting that is turned up, in place of down, and the buttons on the skirt terminate at its upper edge. The three-quarter length sleeves are finished with little turned over cuffs edged with frills and there is a big lace collar to be used as a finish for the round neck. At the waist line, there is a draped girde of the material. Nothing could be simpler, yet the effect is smart in the extreme and the gown one to be remembered, long after more elaborate ones have been forgotten. Taffeta seems especially well adapted to such treatment, but the idea can, nevertheless, be made available in many ways. Summer weather brings the demand for simple models and just such gowns could be made of silk of the lighter weight and of the fine voiles, that are such well-deserved favorites, with equal propriety. Black and white striped voile with plaitings of satin would be smart and gowns of such materials always find a place.

SOME PANIERS CHARMING.

One can hardly imagine the free, active women of today adopting even an approximation to such a garb; yet paniers at their best are very charming. A great deal of white is to be worn this season for costumes of all kinds and lace is almost a craze. A most exquisite gown is made of white faille over Chantilly lace. The skirt consists of just one deep lace flounce and over it is arranged the softly draped panier of silk. The blouse shows one of the very latest developments of the kimono idea, for it is made in one piece with the sleeves, but the sleeves are snugly fitted, clearly revealing the outline of the arms, and they extend to the wrists, where they are finished with frills of lace falling over the hands. At the high neck there is a plaited ruche of lace in which little roses are hidden, and the drapey of the panier is held in place by a garland of roses. The waist line is lifted a little above the normal and right at the front is placed a huge bow of picot-edged ribbon. Combined quaintness and charm are essential characteristics of the costume. It is really very beautiful and distinctive in effect. It illustrates the panier at its best and it also demonstrates the combination of different effects already mentioned. The lace in itself makes an interesting subject, for Chantilly used in every way, is exceedingly smart, and white Chantilly is lovely in the extreme. It and maline may fairly be said to be favorites, but we are likely to see a great deal of Cluny and other heavy laces used upon lingerie gowns as the season grows older. One of the curious features of the present is the use of the thinnest laces upon silk and of the heaviest laces upon fabrics that seem scarcely heavy enough to support them. Paris reports that among the costumes at the famous Longchamps races were seen a great many with the skirts of white Chantilly and maline laces and the jackets and paniers of taffeta, and silks of all sorts in combination with lace make important features.

AD STILL FAVORITE

SAN FRANCISCO, April 19.—The bear stories regarding Wolgast's condition failed to affect the odds today on the second battle between Wolgast and Harlem Tommy Murphy at Jimmy Coffroth's arena this afternoon. Wolgast was still a ten to eight favorite, with indications that these odds would also prevail at the ringside.
